This training organized by Circular Economy Balkan Beacons (supported by EIT Climate-KIC), encompasses state-of-the-art approaches, methodologies and tools that enable strategic positioning of cities for a green, circular transition. This approach provides cities with a way to plan the transition to circularity, generating value that remains in the city, its residents, improves the economic system of the municipality and, with cooperation, unlocks opportunities for the initiation of projects, programs and policies with a far-reaching positive impact on nature, society and the economy of the city.

By setting opportunities that can or must be discovered for the specific situation of the city, and by focusing on innovation needs and the planned impact of the activities that the city will implement, the city is inevitably, in a systemic way, preparing for changes that will bring long-term benefits to the economy, health and life of people.
